Cingular makes deal with MySpace
 POSTED: 10:42 a.m. EST, December 18, 2006

ATLANTA, Georgia (AP) — Cingular Wireless has made a deal with MySpace that will allow MySpace users to access their profiles through Cingular phones.

Under the agreement, cell phone users will be able to go to their MySpace page to edit it, send photos and get messages. For example, a MySpace user could take a picture with their cell phone and then post the image to their Web page.

Signage System:

The WebDT Signage System integrates vivid, high-definition displays with efficient processor computing in one slim, mountable package. With options for touch screen and wireless, applications are limitless for signage and kiosk deployments.

Software:

WebDT Content Manager offers remote management of content files to be played on a digital signage system. WebDT Content Manager's web-based server software provides central management of content, and automates the design and distribution of a wide variety of multi-media file formats into playlists.

WebDT Device Manager is a comprehensive software management tool to remotely manage networked WebDT hardware. The WebDT Device Manager provides a web browser interface fronting a database management system which will readily support - e.g., inventory, organize, control, update - a group of WebDT clients over the LAN, WAN, or wireless network.

Signage Appliance:

WebDT Signage Appliance features a powerful and energy-efficient x86 processor in a compact and robust package. Operating the Windows® XP Embedded system, the powers displays with dynamic content while communicating with the server for continuous updates. With high-quality DVI and VGA output, this scalable, network-ready signage appliance is easy to install, and fan-less, solid-state
